

Continuous Process Improvement

Optimizing people, policy and procedures

At Longevity, Continuous Process Improvement is truly the foundation of our successful management approach. We understand the importance of quality and the value of good business practices, and our Continuous Process Improvement (CPI) consultants are dedicated to making your company run more efficiently while reducing costs. Through the use of CPI, we are able to evaluate your organization, identify problems and take steps to ensure that they are resolved.

Continuous Process Improvement is not a problem solving tool which produces a single solution, but rather a system by which we are able to make small enhancements to your organization and procedures to help reduce variation, eliminate valueless activities and optimize the client experience.

Longevity provides the following services in support of CPI initiatives:

- Lean Operations
- Six Sigma
- Business Process Reengineering

The Agricultural Research Service (ARS) is the Department of Agriculture's chief scientific in-house research agency. Their job is finding solutions to agricultural problems that affect Americans every day, from field to table. Longevity's coaching and support in the Extramural Agreements Grants process helped ARS achieve the following results: Eliminated over 1000 labor hours of work, Reduced the process lead-time by over 4000 hours, Eliminated 14 process steps from the process flow and Created Standard Operating Procedures for all of the processes, developing a common approach across all of the regions.

The Center for Scientific Review (CSR)

Leadership Training

The Center for Scientific Review (CSR) required the development and deployment of a leadership training series for its staff. Longevity's objective was to provide a world class training program designed to deliver a series of interrelated, facilitated training sessions and workshops that would establish the framework and skills required for CSR staff to successfully assume leadership in all aspects of their lives and careers, improving the management of the organizations of which they are part and each individual's career trajectory. The training would also provide the foundation required to promote the developmental skills of collaboration, teamwork, accountability and consistency needed to successfully fulfill the CSR's mission. Through careful collaboration and attention to the needs of the CSR and their stakeholders, Longevity was able to provide the staff with information and training that they could readily apply in both their position within the organization and their day-to-day lives. The benefit to the CSR was realized in the improved performance of their workforce and the reinvestment of their dedication to the agency.
